OFF-PREMISE DINING PRODUCT CATALOGUE

With busy schedules shifting away from the traditional 9-to-5 lifestyles and more people opting to eat their meals in other places besides restaurants, the need for off-premise dining options is booming. In 2017, 40% of meals purchased from restaurants were consumed off premise, and that number is only expected to rise.

While some may say off-premise dining is eating into on-premise performance, savvy operators will see this trend as an opportunity to target a new type of customer and boost sales. Whether you have off-premise program or are brand new to serving the off-premise consumer, Sysco's extensive line of takeout packaging can help you step up your packaging game to ensure consumers have the same quality meal as if they dined in, regardless of where they consume it.

Operators face the challenge of replicating restaurant quality food – looks and tastes – in off-premise orders. And with the average consumer ordering food to go 8 times a month, finding quality packaging that looks good and is functional becomes a challenge.

Above all else, packaging should retain food integrity and meet consumer expectations:

Temp-evidence Everyone wants to think the best of people, but with third-party delivery services showing steady growth and no signs of slowing down, food tampering is also a growing concern. As a peace of mind feature, offering tamper-evident packaging is a small gesture that shows operators keep the customer experience front of mind.
